I am writing this as though on auto pilot - the wind today was very light out of the south east and dropped off by mid afternoon leaving a smooth millpond for us to drift around in. This weather pattern has been with us all year with light winds being the norm. I know that one day we will turn up to find sunny conditions and a reasonable breeze. Despite the lack of wind, the sailing was competitive and at times very close. The Soling 1Ms were up first and the day was won by Phil, followed by Ian and then Sid in third place. The 10Rs had Allan winning the day followed by Phil and then Ian. Next week we sail on the odd week so what will the conditions be like? - I think I know already!
